

Our Mission

Future Pioneers for Empowering Communities' Members in the Environmental and Educational Fields (FPEC) is a Jordan-based non-profit organization. We are specialized in community empowerment through poverty reduction, community building, capacity development, awareness raising, and support to small and medium sized enterprises in the educational, environmental and social fields. Our main target populations are women, youth and marginalized groups.

Key Thematic Areas

We empower communities through long-term investment in local people in five key thematic areas:

- Socio-economic empowerment of marginalized groups, including women and girls
- Green Economy and climate change adaptation
- Environmental conservation and promotion of environmentally sustainable practices, including water governance
- Civic Engagement of Women, Youth, and Marginalized Groups
- Community dialogue and conflict resolution

All our activities are in line with international standards and conventions, putting special focus on human rights, poverty reduction, women's empowerment, and environment as crosscutting themes.

We are also accredited by the European Volunteer Service (EVS) as a sending and receiving organization for volunteers.

Our Approach

FPEC added value is in our capacity to plan and implement large-scale community development projects in a wide range of topics effectively utilizing the potential existing in communities. We always start our projects with analyzing the local needs and through participatory processes design the best responses to those. Our implementation methods are based on extensive empirical evidence, yet adding our understanding of local customs, community structures and social ties embedded in those. Our principle is to work in local communities that are out of stream of services and receive minor or no support from other organizations or international donors
